Cyberbullying: How to keep safe online and deal with it

8 Jan 2014

The charity Childline says it has seen a rise in the number of children contacting it with concerns about online bullying. It saw 4,507 cases of cyberbullying in 2012-13, up from 2,410 in 2011-12.

The charity also saw a rise in concerns about self-harming, while depression and difficult family relationships were the top reasons for seeking help.

For the first time in the charity's history, more counselling took place online (59%) than by telephone (41%).

Peter Wanless, chief executive of the NSPCC charity which runs Childline, said: "The issues facing children today are very different from those that faced us as children.

"Stranger danger, for example, rarely comes up in contacts to Childline but depression, self-harm, online bullying and even suicide contacts are increasing exponentially.

"If we are to help young people we need to listen to what they are telling us about the issues they are facing."

> Casey loves playing games on his Xbox console, especially since it allows him to link up to and compete with other players across the world on Xbox Live. He recently met one teenager in Russia named Boris while playing Call of Duty: Advanced Warfare, and they became fast friends because both enjoyed and excelled at it. Together, they became almost unbeatable whenever they competed as a team against other teams online. At some point, though, Casey told Boris he had found a better gaming partner and didn't want to play with Boris anymore. Boris was outraged that he was being "dumped" as a gaming partner for someone else, and he began to tell other people on the gaming network that Casey "sucked" at all video games and no one should ever be his partner unless they wanted to lose really badly. Soon after these statements started circulating, Casey's new gaming partner dumped him, and everyone else on the network started to reject him (which was particularly crushing because online gaming was a safe haven in his difficult life). When coupled with recollections of other instances of rejection in his life, this experience began to make Casey feel completely hopeless. He then started to express suicidal intentions to his sister.

(i) What are the Cyberbullying issues present in this scenario: (4 marks)

Rule 1: reading gravity

Use:

On the first page we can clearly see F-pattern reading gravity this highlights the artwork, titles, and information, this does not include the person making them feel out of place, suiting the intended message is a emphasis rough high contrast ected by the font ut all the text tyde from the go is white (colour) and the logo font s more abstract in shape (shape) drawing attention to it

A modern San Serif font will be used, one with tight spaces and strange alignments, like rate way, this text will be put on white to contrast with the ~~dark~~ dark purple background

Same enemy as seen on original

F-Pattern reading gravity is used to display all the information

Rule of thirds is used with the secondary text box on the left, title logo on the left and alien on the right and middle boxes
